841 they will not flow for long. The women say that only "stupid ladinas" flow for days and days. It is said, the kuikʃ-as stops the period usually within three days. Four days are considered too long a time. A cloth is used to catch the flow, and some women say that formerly mastate (see p. 18) was used. Some women also say that, at present, nothing is used, and the blood is allowed to drip down the legs. The only tabu on women during this period is that they cannot participate at a fiesta, nor can they serve chicha or food to the men. The menstruating women can watch the gaiety, but must stay apart.

868 Education. Both sexes as children help in the fields, and the girls assist in the kitchen from a very early age. They also learn to make thread, but very few show interest in weaving. The boys make string bags, rope, and hammocks, and sometimes learn to carve gourds.

648 872 The Boruca children are sent to the local school which is run by the Costa Rican Government. The school masters, two in number, are from the central plateau, and until recently, little or no interest was taken in their job. They often were young men who were forced economically to take a post in an outlying Indian group, and who resented the fact, living only for their vacation and the day they might have sufficient friends of influence to permit their transfer to the capital. As a consequence, they frequently lived with Indian girls, and occasionally produced children whom they never bothered to support. The present inspector of the Indian schools and the actual Government, however, are doing their best to change much of this. The Boruca language is being encouraged and taught along with Spanish. A large blank notebook is being filled with the help of the older generation, and an attempt is under way to gather legends. One thing is certain, the younger generation is now obliged to study their own language. This was unheard of a few years ago.

575 178 Marriage. There is no particular ceremony in connection with marriage amongst the Boruca. The few customs that did exist are Slowly disappearing.

[526] both sexes is to tie a vine to a log and swing it, jumping as with a rope.

• 892 On the Pacific side, both sexes go to grange schools when they reach the age of seven and continue for from four to six grades, depending upon the location. Besides Spanish, the official language of Costa Rica, first year teaching is carried out in the mother tongue. Ball games, swings, and see-saws, sewing, cooking, and manual training form an important part of the program. Attention is also paid to hy-
[871] gienic customs. In Cabagra, reading and sewing classes for adults have been started.

582 Marriage. The matrilineal clan, the dominant
[614] social organization of both these peoples (see Social Organization), controls marriage possibilities as one cannot form a union within a blood group related to one's mother. The con-
594 trol of the family falls to the mother if she is 562 alive. Even the men respect her and cases have been known where the mother has beaten male
595 members. It is also important to remember that four wives are permitted (see Myths: Cacao). This is a practise fo[illegible]wed on both [184] sides of the range although [illegible] yet unseen
[582] among the youth of the P[illegible]ope. As a rule, a man marries sisters. [illegible]st wife is always the head of the fam[illegible]nd can rule the others.

584 Courtship is relatively simple. In Talamanca and Chirripó the custom, which has almost entirely disappeared, was for the man to go to a house where there was a girl-child and ask for her as a wife saying, however, that he would care for her as a daughter. Then he would cut the wood for cooking, fish, make mastate, in fact, do daily chores for the girl's mother until the child turned twelve or reached puberty. During this intermediary period, the girl would become accustomed to the man and would run to meet him on his visits to [591] receive some little gift. When the time came, he took her to his parents' home. There they lived in the communal house, or, if his father had too many wives with offspring, he built a house apart but at the side of his parents' house.

In 1959, the man visits his prospective wife three times. He asks her parents' permission to marry and, particularly on the Pacific side, he
